MODIFIED ATTENDANCE GUIDELINES

The University of Tennessee at Martin offers a variety of course options for which attendance and obtaining information from each course are a student's responsibility. Faculty who have established an attendance policy for a course should communicate expectations in the course syllabus. Generally, students are expected to adhere to this policy for each course, but in some cases, the impact of a student's disability can result in absences.

It is the responsibility of the university, in accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act Amendments Act of 2008, to provide reasonable accommodations for individuals with disabilities. When considering a student's request for modified attendance as an accommodation, the Office of Disability Services will review whether the accommodation is aligned with the impact of the disability.

If a student has been approved by the Office of Disability Services for an accommodation for modified attendance based on the impact of a disability, the instructor should consider whether or not classroom attendance is an essential element of their class. Instructors, in consultation with the Office of Disability Services, are responsible for determining if modifying an attendance policy would result in a fundamental alteration of the course. The Office for Civil Rights offers the following seven questions as guidelines for determining if attendance is an essential part of a class (Case no. 09-96-2150: OCR Region IX, 1996):

1. Is there classroom interaction between the instructor and student and among students?

2. Do student contributions constitute a significant component of the learning process?

3. Does the fundamental nature of the course rely on student participation as an essential method for learning?

4. To what degree does a student's failure to attend constitute a significant loss to the educational experience of other students in the class?

5. What do the course description and syllabus say?

6. Which method is used to calculate the final grade? How is attendance calculated in the final grade?

7. What are the classroom practices and policies regarding attendance?

This discussion regarding attendance as a reasonable accommodation should be an individualized, course-by-course discussion based on the impact of the specific disability. It is important that this discussion occur in a reasonable timeframe and in partnership so that the student can make an informed decision regarding potential alternatives. This accommodation should be considered as a reasonable option unless the accommodation fundamentally alters the course as offered.

Attendance Accommodation Agreement

The student must meet with the instructor for each course for which an attendance modification is requested. The student or instructor can request a ODS staff member to be in attendance to help negotiate this accommodation. This meeting should result in the student and faculty member collaboratively agreeing to the outlined terms. This interaction serves two goals:

- Determining to what extent flexibility in the given attendance policy is reasonable.
- Identifying and communicating clear expectations for the implementation of the agreement.

The Attendance Accommodation Agreement should be completed as soon as possible after the instructor has been provided the accommodation letter. The instructor and student should keep a copy for themselves, and the student should return the original to ODS. If the number of absences outlined is exceeded or if there are any concerns from either the instructor or student about the Agreement at a later date, ODS staff should be informed so staff are available to provide consultation about the accommodation as necessary. In some cases, ODS will request that the student provide additional documentation to support any further modification to a course's attendance policy.

Notes:

- Do not simply restate the policy in the syllabus for all students.
- Be as concrete and specific as possible. Use exact numbers and be clear about preferred methods of communicating.
- Please complete the form entirely.
